-Your bank's risk tolerance	3,00	0,00	34	2,97	0,17	34

1) The NPL ratio is defined as the stock of gross non-performing loans on your bank's balance sheet as a percentage of the gross carrying amount of loans. Changes in credit standards and/or terms and conditions can be caused by changes in the NPL ratio or by changes in regulation or in the bank's assessment of the level of the NPL ratio, even if the NPL ratio has remained unchanged.

2) Please select "N/A" (not applicable) only if you do not have any business in or exposure to the respective lending category (as regards credit standards), if you have not granted any new loans in the respective lending category during the period specified (as regards credit terms and conditions), or if you do not have any non-performing loans.

3) This may include costs due to the need for additional provisions and/or write-offs exceeding the previous stock of provisions.

4) This may include expectations of or uncertainty about future supervisory or regulatory requirements.

5) Your bank's perception of risk regarding the general economic situation and outlook, borrowers' creditworthiness and of the risk related to collateral demanded.

7) Number of banks (without "NA" of banks, that do not provide loans in the respective loan category).
